MEASURING TIPS

When measuring it's best to have a friend help since it's difficult to get accurate measurements by yourself. If measuring an entire team, if possible, have one person measure everyone for consistency.

It is important to wear lightweight clothing with a standard sports bra as an undergarment when you are getting measured. Bulky clothing, like fleece and denim, can distort the measurements and lead you to the wrong size.

Use a flexible measuring tape when taking body measurements.

- 1. Chest To measure the chest, slide the tape underneath the arm, and wrap the tape around the body, going over the fullest part of the bust. Pull the tape taut - not tight!
- 2. Waist To measure the waist, wrap the tape around the waist at the belly button. You should always measure at this point even if the garment is intended to be worn lower on the hips or at the natural waist. All garments are fit with natural waist placement in mind, then adjusted according to desired styling and fit.
- 3. Hip To measure the hip, it is best if the person turns to the side with feet shoulder width apart so you can be sure you're measuring around the fullest part of the hip. Once again, you'll just wrap the tape around the hips, going over the fullest or widest part and pulling the tape taut, not tight.
- 4. Inseam For an accurate inseam measurement, place the tape on the crotch seam and measure to the hem. The inseam represents the measurement of the actual garment, not the body. Inseam lengths may vary from the standards listed here — ask your sales representative or chat online to verify the inseam lengths of a specific product.
